ABSTRACT

This handbook describes existing sources of information in linguistics and certain related fields. It is intended principally for the linguistics student at the upper undergraduate or graduate level. The handbook attempts to provide coverage of all major traditional fields in linguistics (e.g., descriptive, historical, phonology, grammar, dialectology, semantics, applied linguistics); of most of the major theoretical approaches to linguistic analysis (e.g., Prague school, tagmemics, transformational analysis); and of major linguistics-related disciplines (e.g., anthropological linguistics, sociolinguistics and psycholinguistics). Coverage of languages and language groups has been limited to language families or areal groupings, and only major journals are included. Most individual articles in journals and serials are excluded, except for important sources of bibliography or history. Most materials are in English, although consideration has been given to material in French, German, Russian and some other languages. Arrangement is by subject throughout, with the following form divisions: bibliographies; periodicals; monographs; congresses and proceedings; maps, atlases, handbooks; histories and surveys; and theory and method. An author index is included. (CHK) history.

Introduction

The present volume attempts to meet the need for a handbook describing existing sources of information in linguistics and certain related fields. It is intended principally for the student of linguistics at the upper undergraduate or graduate level. The established linguistic scholar can therefore scarcely expect to find here any great amount of unfamiliar material, though he may note with surprise or disapproval the inclusion or exclusion of particular titles.

COVERAGE

The handbook attempts to provide coverage of all the major traditional fields in linguistics (e.g. descriptive, historical, phonology, grammar, dialectology, semantics, applied linguistics); of most of the major theoretical approaches to linguistic analysis (e.g. Prague School, tagmemics, transformational analysis); and of the major fields of linguistics and related disciplines (e.g. linguistics and anthropology, linguistics and psychology, linguistics and mathematics). But in order to stay within the prescribed limits of length, the compilers decided to reduce drastically the coverage of languages and groups of languages. Only "language families" or "areal groupings" have been covered (e.g. Germanic but not English; Oceanic but not Samoan), and here only major journals have been included. Thus the student whose main interest is in a particular language or languages of a particular family or area will have to turn to other sources.

Again, in order to stay within the limitations placed upon the length of the handbook, the compilers have in practically all cases sacrificed depth of coverage for variety. Certain kinds of material have been deliberately excluded as a result of decisions taken at the early stages of the work. Excluded are articles that have appeared in journals or other serial publications except when such articles constitute important sources of bibliography or history; Festschriften, because of their enormous numbers; and monograph series published outside the United States. But every effort has been made to retain what appears to be indispensable material in each of the subject fields represented.

Keeping in mind the person for whom this handbook is mainly intended, the American student of linguistics, the compilers have given particular attention to materials published in English, though due consideration has been given to material in French, German, Russian, with some representation for other languages. Concern with the student also accounts for the presence of a number of textbooks, or books that are adaptable for classroom use.

ARRANGEMENT

The arrangement by subject has been used throughout, i.e. bibliographies, periodicals, surveys, and the like are listed with the individual subjects. Thus, a bibliography of phonetics is under Phonetics and Phonemics rather than "Bibliographies", and a journal dealing with anthropological linguistics is under Anthropological Linguistics instead of "Periodicals."

Categories like "bibliographies" and "periodicals" are here called form divisions, and while the types of materials vary in the different subject fields and not all types are found for all subjects, the same form divisions recur in many of the subject divisions of this handbook. With some slight variations as have seemed advisable under each subject, the form divisions are listed in the following order: Bibliographies; Periodicals; Monographs; Congresses and Proceedings; Maps, Atlases, Handbooks; Histories and Surveys; Theory and Method.

In this bibliography, complete bibliographical information for an entry is presented only once. A number in square brackets following a title is a cross reference to the principal entry.

At the end of the volume there is an author index.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A preliminary version of this handbook was drafted by Valdis J. Zeps, now at the University of Wisconsin. Certain additions and emendations to that version were suggested by Miss Claire Asselin, working under the direction of Professor Eric P. Hamp of the University of Chicago. The present compilers developed a new scheme of organization of the handbook, with the result that portions of the earlier version were deleted and substantial amounts of new material added.

In the preparation of this volume the compilers have had the generous assistance of colleagues both at the Center for Applied Linguistics and elsewhere, who have willingly answered questions and made suggestions for its improvement. Particular thanks are due to Dr. Charles A. Ferguson, Director of the Center for Applied Linguistics, and to Dr. William W. Gage, research linguist on the Center staff and Acting Director of the Languages Program. Thanks are also due to Dr. Martin Joos of the University of Wisconsin, who was Visiting Director at the Center as the work was reaching its final stages. Finally, grateful acknowledgement is made to the National Science Foundation for its support of this handbook through a grant (NSF–18866) to the Center for Applied Linguistics.

098 Katz, Jerrold J. and Paul M. Postal. An integrated theory of linguistic descriptions. Cambridge, Mass.: M.I.T. Press, 1964. 178 pp.

Primarily concerned with abstract questions about the nature of language. Aims to provide an adequate means of incorporating the grammatical and semantic descriptions of a language into one integrated description.

099 Malmberg, Bertil. Structural linguistics and human communication. An introduction to the mechanism of language and the methodology of linguistics. New York: Academic Press, 1963. 210 pp.

100 Martinet, André. Eléments de linguistique générale. Paris: Armand Colin, 1960. 224 pp. Trans. Elisabeth Palmer, Elements of general linguistics. Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 1964.

A general introduction to modern structural linguistics.

101 ——— and Uriel Weinreich, eds. Linguistics today. (Publications of the Linguistic Circle of New York, 2.) New York, 1954. 280 pp.

Articles on various aspects of linguistics.

102 Meillet, Antoine. Linguistique historique et linguistique générale. 2 vols. Paris: Champion, 1921–38.

Classic study of the principles and methods of historical and descriptive linguistics.

103 Pike, Kenneth L. Language in relation to a unified theory of the structure of human behavior. 3 vols. Glendale, Calif.: Summer Institute of Linguistics, 1954–60.

Aims to relate linguistic behavior and non-linguistic behavior through an analytical approach similar to that already developed for structural linguistics.

104 Robins, R. H. General linguistics: An introductory survey. London: Longmans, 1964. 384 pp.

Primarily designed for specialist students of linguistics.

105 Sapir, Edward. Language: An introduction to the study of speech. New York: Harcourt, Brace & World, 1921. 258 pp. (Paperback edition: Harvest HB–7.)

A classic in the study of language phenomena.

106 Saussure, Ferdinand de. Cours de linguistique générale. Paris: Payot, 1916. 331 pp. Trans. Wade Baskin, Course in general linguistics. New York: Philosophical Library, 1959.

One of the most important texts on linguistics to be published in the twentieth century. Marks the beginning of scientific linguistics.

107 Sommerfelt, Alf. Diachronic and synchronic aspects of language. Selected articles. (Janua Linguarum, Series Maior, 7.) The Hague: Mouton, 1962. 421 pp.

Fifty-three articles covering a wide range of subjects.

108 Trager, George L. The field of linguistics. (Studies in Linguistics: Occasional Papers, 1.) Norman, Okla.: Battenberg, 1949. 8 pp.

An essay on the nature and aims of linguistic science.

109 Vachek, Josef, comp. A Prague School reader in linguistics. (Indiana University Studies in the History and Theory of Linguistics.) Bloomington, Ind., 1964. 485 pp.

A collection of papers on general linguistic issues by members of the "Prague School" linguistic group. Most of the papers come from the period 1928–1948.

110 Vendryès, Joseph. Le langage: Introduction linguistique à l'histoire. Paris: Albin Michel, 1923. 461 pp. Trans. Paul Radin, Language: A linguistic introduction to history. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1931.

A general introduction to language based on the theories of the French School. Contains good bibliography.

111 Whatmough, Joshua. Language: A modern synthesis. New York: St. Martin's Press, 1956. 270 pp. (Paperback edition: Mentor MD–209.)

Aims to bring together views about language developed in different fields of knowledge, such as communication theory, statistics, symbolic logic, acoustics, and neurology.

DESCRIPTIVE

112 Gleason, H. A., Jr. An introduction to descriptive linguistics. Rev. ed. New York: Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 1961. 503 pp.

An introductory textbook.

113 Harris, Zellig S. Methods in structural linguistics. Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 1951. 384 pp. (Paperback edition: Structural linguistics, Phoenix P–52.)

Presents methods of research arranged in the form of successive procedures.

114 Hill, Archibald A. An introduction to linguistic structures: From sound to sentence in English. New York: Harcourt, Brace & World, 1958. 496 pp.

An introductory text in descriptive linguistics. Examples mainly based on English.

115 Joos, Martin, ed. Readings in linguistics: The development of descriptive linguistics in America since 1925. 3rd ed. New York: American Council of Learned Societies, 1963. 421 pp.

A collection of forty-three articles with comments by the editor.

116 Trager, George L. and Henry Lee Smith, Jr. An outline of English structure. [Rev. ed.] (Studies in Linguistics: Occasional Papers, 3.) Washington: American Council of Learned Societies, 1956. 92 pp.

Important analysis of phonology and morphology of English.

HISTORICAL

117 Hoenigswald, Henry M. Language change and linguistic reconstruction. Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 1960. 168 pp. (Paperback edition: Phoenix P–178.)

Analyzes certain formal properties of language change and makes explicit some of the procedures which lead to the reconstruction of change and to the discovery of lost language structures.

118 Lehmann, Winfred P. Historical linguistics: An introduction. New York: Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 1962. 297 pp.

Covers general principles of historical linguistics, procedures of gathering and analyzing material, and description of the processes of linguistic change.

119 Meillet, Antoine. La méthode comparative en linguistique historique. Oslo: Nygaard, 1925. 116 pp.

An important introduction to the comparative method.

120 Paul, Hermann. Prinzipien der Sprachgeschichte. Halle: Max Niemeyer, 1880. 288 pp. Trans. H. A. Strong, Principles of the history of language. London: S. Sonnenschein, 1890.

Covers the theory and methods of comparative linguistics prior to the development of descriptive linguistics.

121 von Wartburg, Walther. Einführung in Problematik und Methodik der Sprachwissenschaft. 2nd ed., enl. and rev. in collaboration with Stephen Ullmann. Tübingen: Max Niemeyer, 1962. 248 pp.

An introduction to historical linguistics.
